A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on March 25, 2010 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 11-12 and 15-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Palm (US 2,496,489), of record.

Palm shows a hose reel with a single-sided support 18 on the right in Figure 1, which includes an hydraulic motor and planetary, or torque multiplying, gearing, and a hub 66 by which the reel spool 12 is mounted by threaded fasteners 68. The spool is of two parts abutting each other and the flanges are shown in Figure 1 as tapering towards the center. The motor is read as inherently including a speed controller in that speed in mechanical systems never goes to infinity. However, Palm does not show studs. Studs such as for automobile wheels are well known threaded fasteners for attaching elements to hubs. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made for one of ordinary skill in the art to have used studs to attach the Palm spool to the hub in place of the bolts 68 under the rationale set forth in KSR v. Teleflex, U.S.____, 127 S. Ct.

1727, 82 U.S.P.Q. 2d 1835 (2007) that the simple substitution of one known element for another to obtain predictable results is an indication of obviousness. In this case the predictable result is a spool attached to the hub.

Claims 16-17 are, in the alternative, rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Palm in view of Sheetz, of record.

Palm shows the claimed device except, arguably, the spool component details. Sheetz shows a hose reel with spool sections 18, 19 tapered toward the inside so they can be nested. It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have used such tapered spool sections with the reel of Palm to similarly provide for nesting the sections under the rationale set forth in KSR v. Teleflex, U.S.____, 127 S. Ct. 1727, 82 U.S.P.Q. 2d 1835 (2007) that the simple substitution of one known element for another to obtain predictable results is an indication of obviousness. In this case the predictable result is a hose reel spool.

Applicant's arguments have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
